

David Roylance is the UK's No 1 female focus voice and body language specialist.

His clients are women in senior roles in large corporates who are confident and strong but feel as if no one can see or hear them in important meetings and feel that their ideas are either ignored, stolen or "mansplained" from the other side of the table. What they get from working with David are the secrets of how to take charge of their own voice and body, so they can show up and shine. He has an excellent track record in helping women get themselves promoted into board room or head of department positions as well as coaching women into asking for and receiving significant pay rises.

David is a professional actor having studied acting at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama alongside Daniel Craig, Ewan McGregor and Damien Lewis, under the tutelage of Patsy Rodenburg, Head of Voice at the National Theatre and voice coach to some of the greatest actors and speakers alive today.

After working for several years as an actor and theatre director, running his own theatre company touring Shakespeare plays and Christmas pantomime around schools, David found that the most money he made as an actor was in representing corporate businesses from the stage. When those businesses asked him to teach them how to do it themselves, David began working as a trainer and coach as an associate of a few companies before setting up his own company and brand.

David has over 20 years of experience working with FTSE 250 companies, SMEs, entrepreneurs and charities. He has been responsible for fast tracking the first woman onto the board of the RBS and teaching skills that have allowed executives to double their income within a week of intervention.

David also works with entrepreneurs and business start-ups including a number of digital entrepreneurs. He teaches young actors how to hold their own in difficult conversations at three of the UK's top drama schools and has a wonderful family to support and be supported with.
